CURRENT RESEARCH:

I am writing a book on “Imperialism and the Developing World.” This is likely to remain my major project for next few years; five of the planned eight chapters have been drafted.

SELECTED CONFERENCE PRESENTATIONS:

I regularly present papers or chair panels or act as a discussant at the annual meetings of the American Political Science Association, and occasionally at such other professional meetings as those of the International Political Science Association, the International Sociological Association and the Association of Asian Studies.

SELECTED GUEST LECTURES:

Over the last several years I have lectured at most of the major universities in North America (including McGill and Toronto in Canada, and Cornell, Michigan, Harvard, Berkeley and MIT in the U.S.) and several overseas (e.g., The London School of Economics and Oxford University, England; Oslo University, Norway; Nobel Symposium on Democracy at Uppsala University, Sweden; The National Academy of Social Science, Beijing; Jawaharlal Nehru University and Institute for Policy Research, New Delhi; University of Tokyo; the University of Heidelberg; Human Sciences Research Council, Pretoria, South Africa; the Ford Foundation, São Paulo, Brazil; and University of Economics, Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam).
